Mr. Clagett concluded after having argued about an hour by covering in detail that portion of the testimony which referred more directly to the threats made by Taulbee toward Kincaid. Is it not a wonder that he did not make some threats toward toward toward toward. threats toward a man who had attempted to ruin his reputation personally and pro-fessionally? The jury, he continued, ought to weigh with great care the testimony given by Mr. Parsons for the Government and Mr. Stillman for the defense. No one saw Mr. Stillman present in the corridor that day, but Mr.

Mr. Clagett drew some very vivid pict ures of the "sneaking assassination," as he called it, of William P. Taulbee. MIL C. MAURICE SMITH then took up the argument in behalf of the defendant by intimating that Mr. Clagett had simply made an appeal to the sympathies of the jury, and had not tried to explain the testimony of witnesses of good standing and character. Mr. Smith asked the jurors to deal with Taulbee and Kincaid as men, not as ex-Congressmen or journalists, or people whose ancestors had accomplished great deeds. the western terminus of the Beech Creek to Oil City, where connection will be made with the Lake Shore road, thus forming the through route.

All rail freight to Chicago and other points on the Vanderbilt Western system will also go over this route instead of the present one. Another contract will be made between the Roading, Fail Brook and New York Companies covering the business with Central New York and Buffalo.

The Sos this morning says negotiations have been in progress for several days ocking to the acquisition of that road by he Central.

The Vanderbilts, it is said, have the as arrance that Mr. Corbin is perfectly willing to sell, but it is a question of price. The Central wants the Long Island row so as to supply the most accessible route to the West for the entire 2.00,000 in the neighborhood of New York. As matters stand to day the Pennsylvania gets most of the Brooklyn business. The idea of the Vanderbilts is to connect Brooklyn with the Central by tunnel, which would give them a great deal of the Brooklyn business.

comfortable as possible in the jury room. Two leather-cushioned chairs were provided for the two complaining jurors, and Howard Clagett proceeded with the argument for the prosecution where he left off on Friday. He first took up the testiniony given by Woodbridge and McCormick in regard to the conversation between kincaid and Taulbee at the cast door of the House shortly previous to the fatal encounter. Kincaid is the only man who testifies that on that day he was warned to go and arm himself. There were others in a position to hear what was said, but they positively swear that no such expression was used. There is no testimony, said Mr. Clagett, to refute the dying declaration of Taulbee, who denied that he was armed, and declared he did not know who shot him, as his face was turned.

"I deny it," said the prisoner in a clear tone of voice that could be distinctly heard all over the court room. The prisoner's sister took hold of Kincaid's arm and prevailed upon him to keep quiet and not become excited.

have detailed detectives to watch the more rabid of the foreign anarchists who now find refuge in England, and to ascertain whether there is really anything in their talk about starting the commune in London, going through a baptism of blood, and so forth.

If there should prove to be anything in the baptism of blood business, the foreign anarchists will probably be expelled from England or locked up as suspicious persons. The prevalent belief is that the anarchists are harmless and really have no idea of killing the "Beasts of Prey," as they call the people who have property. London, however, is infested with them, as they flock here from all parts of the continent and use the city to hatch plots and conspiracies against continental governments. Hereafter they will be more closely watched.

closely watched Although Germany permits her agent at Solia to act also in behalf of the Rus-sian Government, an arrangement estabished when Bismarck was Chancellor, the Kaiser will not allow the German agency to be the shield of any plots or conspiracies against Prince Ferdinand, as the prompt surrender of a Bulgarian in the employ of the Embassy has shown. A peculiar international question has arisen at a place called Hoffa on the Swiss-German frontier. An Italian who had traversed Switzerland with a performing monkey and a barrel organ, crossed the line into Germany. He was arrested for the want of a passport. While in prison his monkey not being properly confined, got loose and injured a child by biting. The monkey was killed.

The Italian was released and sent back across the frontier, but he has remained for days just on the other side, shouting abuse and memores at the German sentinel immediately opposite and loudly demanding compensation for his monkey. The German authorities want the fellow silenced, but the Swiss have refused to interier with him, on the ground that he is doing no harm and has a grievance. linve been in progress for second days between the Vanderbilts and parties rep-resenting the controlling interest in

A Stockholm dispatch says that the Swedish Government is being strongly advised to put down Norwegian disaffection with a forcible hand. The Government's critics claim that Sweden has been too lenient and conclinatory in its treatment of Norway, and has thereby encouraged the spirit of secession among a certain class, who would sooner see Norway under the protection of Russia or Denmark than of Sweden. Neither of these powers, it is said, would dare to help Norway, should the disaffection be dealt wiff now. Russian emissaries are charged with funenting trouble in Norway. WAY. BALBACEDA'S DOWNFALL. It was that people who belong down Southethe natives—are manifesting an activity in the development of their section of the country that has been lost sight of by many in the North. Northern capital is doing a great deal, to be sure, but it is not doing everything. Southern brains and Southern money are playing an equal, indeed, I can safely say, a greater part, in the industrial progress. In a very few minutes all were in flames.

But few of the citizens were on the scene until the tre was well under head-way, and efforts were made to save property, but with poor effect, as the buildings, being of highly inflammable material, burned rapidly.

In the midst of the bottest part of the fire an Italian girl about 16 years of age appeared at the window of one of the burning buildings and leaped toward the ground, two of the firemen catching her before she struck the ground. the industrial progress.

ground, two of the firemen catching her before she struck the ground.

Between her sobs she stated that all her father's family were yet in the borning house, but as the flames now had full control of the building it was impossible to save them, and seven persons perished in the Italian family.

The rooms occupied by the Italians were in the centre of the building, and, when it was found that lives had been lost, a careful inquiry was made regarding the occupants of the first building to take fire. It was inhabited by a shoemaker named Edward J. Ksene, with a family consisting of a wife and three children.
